

Family Reunion.

At the home of John Abplanalp, in Fillmore, Mo., a family reunion was held on Christmas day. Four daughters, Mrs. Ed Hornecker, Anna, Lora and Cora, three sons, Newt, Wesley and Charles, and seven grandchildren made things pretty lively for a while, and the day will long be remembered by all present. Mrs. Wm. C. Opel, of this city, a sister-in-law of Mr. Abplanalp, and her two grandsons, Geo. Polley, of Oregon, and Carl Lewis, of Sadorus, Ill., were among the guests.

We have been going about much of the time in our shirt sleeves or with light coats on. We are well pleased with our change, and we like farming irrigated lands. It is certainly great to run the water on to your crops and give the ground a good soaking whenever it needs it, and in due time see the stuff grow. To irrigate is really a recreation, and one enjoys it. It only takes about fifteen minutes to get the water started, then you sit by and see the water go over your crops and it is all done in the space of an hour. We raise an abundance of everything including apples, peaches, pears, plums, and in fact most all kinds of fruits and garden stuff. I am through hauling my alfalfa, which made over four tons to the acre, which I sold at $20 per ton. My forty acres, 35 in hay, brought me $2,500 this season. The expense was down low on account of so much being done by machinery. Our water costs us $1.25 an acre for the season, which is used for maintaining the ditches and takes. Corn yields 40 to 80 bushels to the acre; barley, 30 to 90; wheat, both winter and spring, from 40 to 80; and oats, 50 to 100; beets, from 6 to 20 tons per acre, for which they get $10 per ton. The old settlers claim they do best producing canteloupes and water-melons and tomatoes, than any other crop in the valley. Of course, there is much risk in the raising, and the price is ever uncertain. We have alfalfa mills and elevators to care for these, and the best and most modern dumps to handle the beets to ship them on to the sugar factories. We haul our hay loose to the mill, and can pull from two to five tons at a load, and I live within 1-4 miles of the mill and only 2 1/2 miles from town. When you buy land here you buy the water right with it. Land has jumped from $150 to $300 per acre since last fall. I paid $8,000 and have turned down $10,600 for mine. Any one of my friends coming this way to look over the country, can find my latchstring outside and I will do my best to show them, knowing that they come from Missouri.

"Sincerely,

"HARRY SIPES.
